

To dispose of unwanted items that cannot find a home take them to your nearest Household Waste Recycling Centre free of charge, or contact your local authority customer call centre to arrange a bulky collection at a fee.

To buy items from furniture reuse groups you will need to show you are receiving benefits or on a low income. Contact the nearest store serving your district to discuss. The groups can also arrange low cost collection and delivery on larger items.

Did you know that every year 500 tonnes of waste is kept out of landfill through Somerset's furniture reuse groups? Across the UK 3000 people are working to collect and deliver used furniture and appliances.

Your local charity shop

Most towns have at least one charity shop selling anything from books to bric-a-brac and clothes. More and more are now also selling furniture and electrical items.

Take the opportunity to support the cause of your choice and pick up a bargain at the same time.

Reuse online

There are several ways you can donate, sell, find and buy good quality items at cut down costs - or even free! - online.

Online auction sites: The most widely known is www.ebay.co.uk, but there are many others. These let you post goods for sale or bid for items to buy, so you can find a new home for your items and make a little money to boot.

Or use the increasingly popular Freecycle, where you can easily find a new home for your unwanted items by posting them as free "giveaways". It's a great way of using the things you no longer need by helping local people put them to good use. Go to www.uk.freecycle.org to register and start clearing the clutter from your home. There are already nine groups in Somerset with over 20,000 members.

Some local communities are now setting up their own swap and reuse sites. Look out for one near you and if you don't have one why not set one up?
